ESI Serves as Judge for 2004 Secretary of Defense Environmental Awards

Recognizing excellence in environmental management is a crucial element in Department of Defense efforts to support the twin imperatives of producing the best-trained military force in the world while providing the best environmental stewardship possible. Each year, the Secretary of Defense honors installations, teams and individuals for outstanding environmental management by military and civilian personnel, at both domestic and overseas bases, to sustain military readiness, and training and operational capabilities.

Brenda Robinson, President, and Harry Gregori, Vice President served on a distinguished panel of judges for this year's 2004 Secretary of Defense Environmental Awards, concluding ceremonies held 5 May, 2005 at the Pentagon in Washington, DC. As part of the panel of judges, Ms. Robinson and Mr. Gregori were called upon to judge the Pollution Prevention Category. Judging was based on:

1. How well the nominee managed the program,
2. The program's technical merits,
3. How well the program supported the military readiness/civil works mission, how effectively pollution prevention-based management of significant environmental aspects was integrated into mission activities and how pollution prevention was used to enhance long-term mission sustainability,
4. How effectively the program's lessons learned may be transferred from the nominee to others and
5. The nominee's success in involving base personnel, process owners, residents and the local community in the program.

"We are honored to be among those chosen to participate in the judging of the 2004 Environmental Awards. ESI's business model is not only about enabling businesses and organizations to Advance Beyond Compliance in relation to its environmental and economic processes, but also to serve as an active member of the community," said Brenda Robinson, President of ESI.
